EVAN ODELL

Currently searching for a position at the intersections of public policy, health and data. I've built many R packages to streamline social science research and maintain a widely used dataset of UK parliamentary speeches far superior to the official version. I make interactive maps of things like the relationship between housing prices and public transport services, or the amount of land given over to golfing. I believe in opening up data to allow people more control over their lives.

comparative analysis of welfare states.
